

Biodiesel available in Byron Bay

Written by

Wednesday, 05 April 2006 10:03

There are only 5 outlets in Australia where biodiesel is available to the general public, and one of them just opened up in Byron Bay TODAY

Many of us have met Simeon and Anthony Michaels. For the last 2 years Anthony has been supplying fresh cooking oil to restaurants in the Northern Rivers. He has also been collecting the used cooking oil and sending it down to Newcastle to be manufactured into Biodiesel.

Today Anthony has “closed the loop” on his eco-system by bringing the biodiesel back up to Byron to be sold locally – congratulations Ants on your opening day.