

Hi, and welcome to my website - a place where I've collected writings both current and past.

I work at the interfaces of Sustainability, Community and Technology.

I'm passionate about sustainability at scale; about taking solutions to those less able to afford it; and in particular in developing countries. Currently that means supporting Innovators working in, and for, developing countries through Natural Innovation .org.

In the past that has included building a solar company that pioneered large scale community purchasing in Australia, and co-founding the Association for Progressive Communications.
